The Daily Courant.

Friday, February 26. 1714.

Extract of a Letter from the Isle of Man, dated January 28. 1713.

'ON Tuesday last an Information was delivered to the Government here by one Dennis Obryan, setting forth, that he had convincing Circumstances that a Gentleman lately arrived here from Ireland, who goes by the Name of Sabbarton, is Collonel George Mackartney, reported to have killed the Duke of Hamilton; whereon the Government had the said Sabbarton brought before them, and on Examination the said Dennis Obryan owned he never knew Collonel Mackartney, and refused to Sign his Information. The Substance of two Evidences that came with Sabbarton on Ship-board from Dublin bound for the Isle of Man, was, that by contrary Winds they put into Killough in Ireland, within seven Miles of the Town where Mr. Mackartney was born, that the Vessel they came in staid seventeen Days at Killough, at which time the said Sabbarton went publickly abroad, and rid to Lisburn and several other Towns, and behaved himself civilly, and that from thence they came along with him to the Isle of Man. The third Evidence was one Mr. Murray (who lately came from Scotland, and since his being here drank the Pretender's Health, which he will hardly venture to do again in this Isle); he declared that Sabbarton agrees partly with the Description Mr. Mackartney bears in some Points, which gave him Suspicion of Sabbarton's being Mackartney, but would not positively Swear him to be Mackartney. And on the other Hand, Mr. Wybrants, a Gentleman that has lived several Years in this Island, made Oath, that about 25 Years ago he knew one Captain George Mackartney, who since was preferred to a Regiment, and that the Person then under Examination (viz. Sabbarton) is not the said George Mackartney, nor at all like him. Captain Cross declares, That he has seen this Sabbarton in the Fleet on board Admiral Nevil, and since he came here he has found by Conversation with the said Sabbarton, that he has been in the Navy; and has reason to believe Sabbarton, by the Account he gives of several remarkable Passages that happened in the Navy, which he could not have done had he not actually served in the same. The Account Sabbarton gives of himself is, that he was several Years in her Majesty's Navy, and in several Employments, as Secretary to the late Admiral Nevil in the Years 1694 and 1695, and was with him in the Expedition against Pointis when he took Carthagena in the West-Indies, and was by the said Admiral made Purser of the Ruby Man of War. All which being considered, Obryan's Information is looked on as Groundless, and no further Cognizance is taken of this Affair.'
